

CONTRACT AWARDED FOR IMPROVEMENTS AT PERSHING SCHOOL

The Pershing school grounds are to be improved by the erection of concrete retaining walls and wire fencing is to be placed around the school grounds.

The board of trustees of the Jefferson school district held a specially called meeting in the Vista Grande school, on Mission street, last Saturday evening at 8 o'clock, for the purpose of opening bids for the concrete retaining walls and wire fencing for the Pershing school grounds. The notice for submission of bids had appeared for the past three weeks in the Record.

Trustees W. J. Sweeney, Louis Nava and G. R. Augustin, assisted by Architect Norman R. Coulter and Engineer F. L. Conlan, opened the bids.

After all bids had been opened, Charles Anderson, local contractor, was found to have presented the lowest bid, accompanied by a certified check for 10 per cent of the bid, his bid amounting to $2,800.

The trustees were well pleased with the large number of contractors submitting bids, and were glad a local contractor received the contract.

Engineer F. L. Conlan assured the trustees that the work will start immediately following the completion of all legal papers, so that it will be finished in time for the opening of school.

MEMBERS OF EASTERN STAR ENJOY SPLENDID PROGRAM

Following the business meeting of Crocker Chapter No. 382, Order of the Eastern Star, last Monday evening in Masonic Hall, a splendid program was presented for the entertainment of the members, under the direction of Mrs. Florence Stockton, Worthy Matron. The program consisted of vocal solos by Mrs. Margaret Coswell, Esther of Imperial Chapter; Mrs. A. Gowland, vocal solos; Mr. and Mrs. Albert S. Brown, of Texas, vocal and piano solos. Mr. Brown is in charge of the Shrine program in Texas. Mr. Kenneth MacLean, solos; Mr. Henry Sundermann, trombone solos.

Following the program dainty refreshments were served in the banquet room by the following committee: Mrs. Edith Lancaster, Mrs. Ellen Grantz, Mrs. A. M. Evensen, Mrs. Elizabeth Story, Mrs. Isabel Adams and Miss Jane Gowland.

TENDERED SURPRISE PARTY IN HONOR OF BIRTHDAY

Mrs. Arthur Thorpe, of Risel avenue, was tendered a surprise party last Saturday evening at her home in honor of her birthday, which was Friday, July 13, by her neighbors and several friends. Mrs. Thorpe, who has been confined to her bed for the past month, suffering from pleuritis and blood poisoning in her left leg, was unable to participate in the games and dancing, but enjoyed every minute of the evening. A three piece orchestra furnished music for dancing, and at midnight a tempting supper was served.

Those present to enjoy the evening were: Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Thorpe and children, Evelyn and Roy; Mr. and Mrs. Rudy Anderson, Mrs. Peggy Hickey, Mrs. Olga Rodach, Misses Janet Cowan, Georgia Wooten, Norma Furlong, Doris Maloney; Messrs. Bert Taylor, William Soper, Emory Anderson, Jack Bosco, Louie Durhn.

ASSEMBLYMAN PARKMAN SEEKING RE-ELECTION

Assemblyman Harry L. Parkman has been about town looking over the political situation and meeting his many friends. Assemblyman Parkman represented San Mateo county in the last legislature, and is seeking re-election. As there are many thousands of bills introduced each session of the legislature which affect the welfare and prosperity of every citizen, our representative must study and understand the needs and problems of San Mateo county and must be a man of business experience and with varied contacts. He must also have the courage of his convictions and backbone enough to stand and fight for the interests of the people he represents. Mr. Parkman's friends seem to be convinced that he should again represent them in the state legislature.

COUNTY FIREMEN MEET

J. W. Coleberd, city attorney of South San Francisco, was the principal speaker Tuesday night at the convention of the Associated Firemen of San Mateo county, held in San Bruno. The speaker discussed the fire acts of 1881 and 1923. Firemen from all sections of the county were present.

LIONS ENTERTAINED BY FORMER MEMBER RUSSIAN CONGRESS

A most interesting meeting was enjoyed by the members of the Daly City Lions Club who were present at the monthly evening session last Monday evening at the Colonial Cafe.

The agreeable surprise of the evening was an address by Lieutenant-Colonel Dimitri Alexandrovich Korpensky, known in America as Colonel Alexander Schwartz, former commander of the bodyguard of the late czar of Russia, and afterwards a member of the Second Congress Third International at Moscow. Colonel Schwartz is also the author of the book "The Voice of Russia."

Colonel Schwartz, in a most interesting address of an hour's duration, presented a graphic description of the Russian political, religious and economic situation, also telling of his being sentenced to death, later being banished to Siberia and confined in prison, finally escaping from Siberia and making his way to America.

Colonel Schwartz will speak at the Daly City Methodist church next Sunday at 8 o'clock, and it is probable that the members of the Lions Club who listened to him Monday night will be present to again listen to this interesting speaker.

It was decided by the members to change the time of meetings from Monday to Wednesday noon of each week, except the fourth Wednesday of the month, when the meeting will be held at 7:30 p. m.

The newly installed officers, President Ernest Micco and Secretary Otto Schramm, are proving to be live wires, and interest of the members in the work of the Lions Club is noticeably increasing.

DALY CITY RESIDENT IS HIGHLY HONORED

Editor Daly City Record:

The readers of your paper will probably be pleased to learn that one of their number has recently been highly honored by being chosen as the leader of the female branch of one of our most progressive cosmopolitan and fraternal organizations. Mrs. Carolina Blair, of 144 Santa Cruz avenue, Daly City, has been elected Grand Arch Druidess of the Grand Circle of the well known order of the United Ancient Order of Druids of California, and in this capacity will not leave any stone unturned to make her term a grand success in the interest of the order, the Grand Circle and the community in general. The aims and purposes of this most liberal order are too well known to be in need of any special recommendation. It is an honor, a pleasure and a privilege to be one of its members, more especially of the female branch, which is thoroughly alive to the requirements of the hour.

Mrs. Blair has for many years been one of the most popular, helpful and progressive members, always ready to go out of her way to serve some worthy cause. She has the intention to organize a new Circle of the order in this neighborhood, if possible, and she deserves the assistance and the friendship of all who are at all interested in the public welfare and fraternal ideals, as well as in their own personal benefit and security. The officers and members of Germania Circle No. 35 are proud and happy to count Mrs. Blair among their members, and hope to see her plan realized in the near future.

MRS. ANNA L. VON RAVEN,
Secretary Germania Circle No. 35, U. A. O. Druids.

SAN FRANCISCO BOY COMES TO DALY CITY FOR BRIDE

Miss Thais E. Kirkpatrick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dave Campbell, of 101 Santa Cruz avenue, and Milton F. McCarthy, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. McCarthy, of 788 Ashbury street, San Francisco, were quietly married last Saturday morning at 11 o'clock, at St. Anne's church in San Francisco, only the immediate families of bride and groom being present. After the ceremony the young couple left immediately for a two weeks motor trip during which they will visit Lake Tahoe. Upon their return they will make their home in Daly City.

RETURNS FROM EASTERN TRIP

Miss Irene Devlin, of 6067 Mission street, who has been in New York for the past month, returned last Sunday. Miss Devlin reports having had a wonderful trip, combining business with pleasure, and visited all the points of interest, including a trip to Niagara Falls, Grand Canyon, Colorado, and returning by way of New Mexico and Los Angeles, arriving in San Francisco on the Lark. Miss Devlin is buyer for Walter A. Muller, wholesale milliners.

No Time for Politics Now

RUSSIAN LECTURER AT M. E. CHURCH

Lieutenant-Colonel Dimitri Alexandrovich Korpensky, known in America as Colonel Alexander Schwartz, a former member of the Second Congress Third International at Moscow, and former commander of the czar's guards, will deliver his famous lecture on the Russian political, religious and economic situation at the Daly City Methodist church next Sunday evening at 8 o'clock.

The church is indeed fortunate to be able to present such a prominent speaker to the people of Daly City. Herbert Hoover writes this personal note to Colonel Schwartz: "Your message should be heard by every American citizen that believes in pure democracy."

Lieutenant-Colonel Dimitri Alexandrovich Korpensky, former commander of the Czar's Guards, known in America as Colonel Alexander Schwartz

The San Francisco Journal, speaking of Colonel Schwartz's address before the Commonwealth Club, says: "Such was the interest in his talk yesterday that 115 extra guests were seated in the Palace Hotel ball room, besides the 260 reservations, and 25 were turned away for lack of room."

The Chicago Tribune pays a fine tribute to Colonel Schwartz's ability as a speaker, and his interesting address.

You should not fail to hear him. Please come early and secure a good seat. No admission charge will be made for this lecture.

AIR MAIL RATES CUT ON AUGUST 1

The reduction in air mail rates, effective August 1, will prove of great benefit to the business and professional interests of the entire nation, according to postal experts. Under the new schedule the present rate of ten cents per half ounce for air mail dispatch is to be cut to five cents for the first ounce and ten cents for each additional ounce or fraction thereof. It is pointed out that the average letter weighs less than an ounce.

After August 1 it will be possible to send a letter to any part of the United States via air mail for five cents that would cost two cents by ordinary train dispatch. The air mail takes 20 hours from California to Chicago, 30 hours to cross the continent and directly reach more than 65,000,000 people.

The new rates, it is conceded, to a great extent will do away with the necessity of using special delivery stamps.

Citing some of the benefits to accrue, it is pointed out that insurance companies will be encouraged to send applications for policies and loans to the home office by air mail and thus benefit the policy holder; chain stores will send in their reports via air mail; banks will send their exchange in this manner; motion

VETERANS ENLISTED AS FIRE FIGHTERS

"Mounting guard" in defense of California's forests and fields, 500 World War veterans, recruited by Sacramento Post of the American Legion, on Wednesday were mustered into service as emergency state fire fighters.

Composed of units of 50 men each, fully equipped for emergency duty on the fire lines, the Legion army of fire fighters was formally placed at the command of State Forester M. B. Pratt by E. T. Cook, director of forest fire prevention for the local Legionnaires and organizer of the company.

The volunteer organization, which will be "on call" at all times, was characterized by Deputy State Forester W. B. Rider as "one of the greatest steps yet undertaken toward co-operative fire suppression." Rider, who worked out plans with Cook for linking the volunteer company into the state fire-fighting organization, warmly praised the American Legion for taking the initiative in the work and singled out Cook as deserving of special commendation for launching the co-operative movement.

The emergency fire-fighters are so organized that they can be called out in first, second and third line units, rated on the rapidity with which they can be assembled and on whether the men are available for short or long period of service, Rider said.

Trucks to take the former soldiers into the fire lines have been secured by Legion posts, together with necessary supplies and tools.

GRACE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

The pulpit of Grace Presbyterian church, Hanover and Evergreen, will be occupied by the Rev. E. L. Eisel next Sunday, July 22. All interested in the upkeep of the Sunday school and church work are especially urged to be present. Sunday school at 10 a. m. C. E. at 7 p. m. Evening service at 8 p. m.

A congregational meeting will be held after the evening service to consider the advisability of extending a call.

The board of trustees of Grace church will meet at 9 o'clock Sunday evening, July 22.

The Sewing Club will meet for work on Wednesday, July 25, at 1:30 p. m., at the church, Hanover and Evergreen.

HOOVER VISIT POSTPONED

The death of Mrs. Hoover's father, C. G. Henry, at Placerville Wednesday morning, caused the postponement of the visit down the Peninsula of Herbert Hoover and also the big reception planned for today for the Republican presidential candidate at Palo Alto. Mr. Henry's funeral will take place today from the Hoover home at Stanford. Nothing definite has yet been arranged for Mr. Hoover's visit to the Peninsula at a later date, according to the message from the Hoover headquarters in San Francisco to County Clerk Elizabeth M. Kneese, secretary of the San Mateo county Republican central committee.

motion picture distributors will use the airplanes to distribute their films to distant points; stores will send in their orders via air mail and receive rush orders by return plane; flowers will be shipped the same way; jewelers are expected to make heavy use of the aerial service especially as the maximum registry indemnity has been increased from $100 to $1000; deeds and transfers will be sent through the air; bills of lading will be forwarded this way—in fact, it is declared business of all kinds will be speeded up.

FUNDS PROVIDED TO ADVERTISE BEAUTIES OF PACIFIC COAST

Adoption of a $150,000 advertising program to boost the beauties of the entire Pacific Coast was voted last Monday at a meeting of the directors of the Pacific Highway Association, held in San Francisco.

Outlined by Ernest A. Crowley, general manager of the organization, the program calls for expenditures of $7,500 for newspaper and magazine publicity stories on the Pacific Coast, $80,000 for an all-year advertising campaign, $27,400 for pamphlet and map printing and distribution, $10,200 for maintenance of information bureaus on the Coast, $10,000 for radio broadcasting, $6,000 for erection of special highway boards and $9,000 for publicity and information contacts.

The Pacific Coast Highway Association was organized last year to promote greater travel on the Pacific Coast, and the program of advertising about to be launched is designed to bring greater unity among the different sections.

"Instead of bringing tourists just to San Francisco, or to Los Angeles, or to the Pacific Northwest," Crowley told the directors, "we must see to it that they visit the entire Pacific Coast."

"It is travel of this sort that will make for constant development of the Coast section. The Pacific Coast is too great a beauty spot to have its travel limited."

"Only a small percentage of the travel that comes into Southern California moves northward, we have found, and the tourists who motor into the Pacific Northwest stick to that section of the country."

"We plan to so advertise the Pacific Coast that our visitors will want to see all of it, instead of only a part, and we have a number of plans we will announce soon that are expected to attract attention to our scenic advantages."

AVIATORS PROTEST ORDINANCE ADOPTED TO REGULATE FLYING

A deluge of protests descended upon the board of supervisors at Redwood City last Monday, as a result of the ordinance recently enacted by the San Mateo county supervisors regulating aviation activities in San Mateo county. The protests were led by President Edwin J. Moffett of the Pacific Aero Club, who asked that the ordinance be reconsidered. The ordinance was adopted July 2 and becomes effective August 2.

According to Moffett, the ordinance would prohibit flying by old-timers who were without modern department of commerce licenses. Moffett said that many pioneers, fully competent to pilot planes, had not taken out the new license because of the heavy expense involved and because of the fact that they fly only for pleasure.

It was pointed out that the new ordinance would practically make impossible the air circus scheduled to be held at Redwood City in September under the joint auspices of the Pacific Aero Club and the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce.

President E. B. Hinman of the Chamber of Commerce, and Charles Lambert, prominent realtor, asked that the board seriously consider this phase of the situation.

Chairman John Poole of the supervisors made it clear that he stands for reconsideration of the ordinance, if the objectors can substantiate the allegations. Chairman Poole suggested that the officers of the club confer with Superintendent Frank Flynn of Mills airport relative to an amicable settlement, as the ordinance was first suggested by Flynn.

NEW CONSTRUCTION AT RECORD HIGH

It is becoming difficult for even expert observers in the construction field to account for the vast volume of work reported from week to week in most sections of the United States. The building industry fears no slump in activity for some time to come and the view is more and more generally accepted that a new era has been entered upon.

The optimists have the call—of that there can be no doubt just now. But while their most optimistic predictions are being sustained by developments it is nevertheless perplexing to account for the continued record activity in the construction field. No matter how much new work is carried to completion, each completed job is followed by the start of another project, often larger than its predecessor.

Surprising as it may seem, no signs are yet discernable of a falling off in residential buildings. This class of projects accounts for 62 per cent of the contracts awarded during May in New York City, and for 35 per cent in the New England states. It represents 45 per cent of all new construction started during May in the Middle Atlantic states, 43 per cent in the Pittsburgh district, and 41 per cent in the Central West. Even in the South-eastern states, where the slowing-down in building was so noticeable in April, continued during May, 36 per cent of all contracts awarded were for residential projects.

The approach of mid-summer finds conditions in the industry quite generally satisfactory. There is no real serious wage disputes disturbing employers, the market is well supplied with labor of all classes and it is a matter of common remark that the efficiency of the workmen in the building trades never has been higher since the World war.—Frank E. Perly in Forbes Magazine.

For the benefit of unmarried ladies who are prone to procrastinate, they are reminded that leap year is more than half gone.

POLICE CHIEFS PREPARE ANTI-AUTO THEFT DRIVE

A nation-wide drive to halt the automobile thief will be one of the results of the recent annual convention of the International Association of Police Chiefs, according to information brought to San Francisco by W. E. Schoppe, superintendent of the National Automobile Theft Bureau, Pacific coast division. Plans were outlined at the convention, Mr. Schoppe reported, that will put in motion one of the most comprehensive efforts to halt the auto thief ever inaugurated in the United States.

This drive will have the aid of the various police chiefs and police commissioners in Canada, many of whom attended the convention, which was held at Colorado Springs in the last weeks of June. It is also planned to make an effort to have the police departments of Mexico aid in this drive in order to prevent the thieves from making that country a haven.

As one of the chief features of this drive, it was determined that all information involving the theft of automobiles and other automotive vehicles will be promptly exchanged by all cities of more than 30,000 population in the United States and Canada. This information, it is declared, will make the apprehension of thieves and the recovery of stolen cars more certain than under the present system.

It was also decided that these cities would immediately organize auto theft squadrons, under competent and experienced officers, who will be charged with the sole duty of checking upon all stolen cars reported from all other cities in the network. It is planned that the members of these squads will have no other duties to perform, but will devote their entire time to carrying out the convention plans to reduce the number of auto thefts.

It was brought out at the convention that in 1927 approximately 10 per cent of all the automobiles in use on the highways of the country were stolen cars. In other words, about 220,000 cars were the booty of thieves. It also was brought out that of this number 92 per cent were recovered and returned to their owners by the police departments and the National Automobile Theft Bureau.

Another aid in the anti-auto theft drive will be the radio stations in many of the leading cities. Plans are being made to have the descriptions of stolen cars and wanted thieves broadcast throughout the country. It is hoped that by this means not only to quickly locate the stolen cars but also to assure the prompt arrest of the thieves.

AND THERE IS NO TALK OF SECESSION IN NEW MEXICO

Once more we rise to call attention to the fact that the Spanish-speaking population of the State of New Mexico is not now petitioning and never has petitioned the Congress of the United States for redress against oppression, nor is this population agitating for secession from the United States and a reunion with Mexico.

Though we Americans ruthlessly exterminated the Indian, we have always shown remarkable wisdom in handling the foreign-language groups resident among us. Wisely we have never tried to prohibit the use of their mother tongue whenever they felt inclined to indulge in it, nor have we denied them the equal protection of the law.

We hereby extend an invitation to Mussolini, Poincare, Pidsulski and other European rulers troubled with rebellious undigested foreign elements to be our guests in New Mexico and investigate the American way of keeping an alien element contented until in the slow process of time it is assimilated. Mussolini, you know, is trying to make good Italians out of the Tyrolese by imprisonment, fines, banishment and confiscation if they dare even to think in their native language; Poincare hasn't had much success in handling the Alsace-Lorraine population, having to send a dozen secessionists to jail amid riots and protest meetings. Pidsulski has half a dozen Alsace-Lorraines on his hands. They would stop groaning, agitating and rioting if the liberal New Mexican treatment were meted out to them.—August Sunset.

FACTS ABOUT THE TELEPHONE

More than three and a half billion dollars are invested in the telephone plant and equipment of the United States.

The states of New York, Illinois, Pennsylvania, California and Ohio have over a million telephones apiece.

Over $868,000,000 are invested in the aerial plant, including wires and poles, of the Bell telephone system in this country.

In 1895 the United States had 285,400 telephones, while Germany had 115,007 and Great Britain had only 73,333 telephones.

One telephone cable often contains as many wires as eight open wire pole lines could carry, and one pole line sometimes carries several cables.

MISS DOVE

"It was kind of you, just now," said Miss Pigeon to Miss Dove, "to offer me a bath in your eaves and save me the trouble of flying home."

"You'll accept then?" asked Miss Dove.

"Thankfully," said Miss Pigeon. "Well, I think I'll take a little shower myself," said Miss Dove.

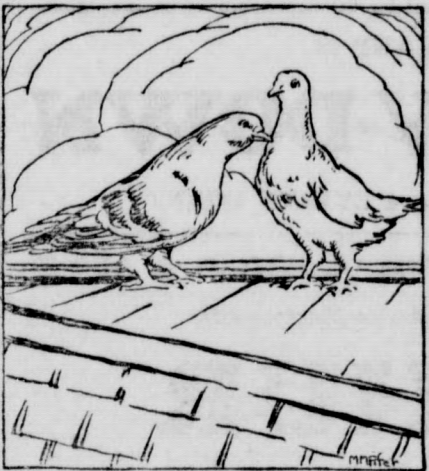

So they bathed and were nice and clean, and they felt very fresh and cool and happy.

"Now we'll have a rest," said Miss Pigeon, "eh? A little rest and a little chat."

"Yes, indeed," said Miss Dove, "and you must tell me why we are as fine as people."

"You said that when you first came to visit me today."

"Ah, to be sure," said Miss Pigeon. "Well," she continued, after a little pause, for both Miss Pigeon and Miss Dove had dozed off, and each had taken a tiny nap, "well," she went on, "I heard the other day that there was a special place where they could obtain houses and homes of all sorts and sizes for doves and pigeons. Some of these they called 'portable' which meant that they could be moved about.

"But the great and glorious thing to me about it was that it was so superior."

"Now we are to have houses brought from little shops and big shops—just as people go to such offices and rent houses."

"It just seems exactly like being a person and seeing about a summer home—ah—and they show fine homes for us, too."

"Tell me about them," said Miss Dove.

"They're very beautiful and of a nice generous size for the most part, and they're painted in green and white."

"Beautiful!" said Miss Dove. "So cooling are those colors. Green is very good for the optic nerve."

"What in the world is the optic nerve?" asked Miss Pigeon.

"The optic nerve," said Miss Dove, "is the nerve of the eyes. Green would be good for eyes—keeps them from getting tired."

"I wanted to show you that I knew a good word, too."

And after they had talked some more about the possible new summer homes their owners would get for them, they went to sleep and dreamed of green and white houses!

Miss Dove made her friends feel right at home!

Great Diplomat

It isn't hard to pick tomorrow's diplomat. He's the one selected to call on the old lady when the $1.50 baseball drops over the fence into her paws.

STORY FROM THE START

Anthony Trent, once master criminal, now reformed, returns to New York after four years' absence. He learns his friend, Capt. Frank Sutton, is in Sing Sing. Trent is surprised to find his New York apartment occupied by a stranger, Campbell Sutton, who represents himself as the brother of Frank Sutton. Trent is asked by Campbell to force a confession from Payson Grant, whom he accuses of having crookedly obtained all of Frank Sutton's property and then married the latter's wife. Trent starts on a campaign to accomplish the downfall of Grant. He learns that Captain Sutton has escaped from Sing Sing and later, to his surprise, finds that Campbell is really Frank Sutton. Trent takes his place in society as the opening gun of his campaign against Grant. He becomes a house guest of the Grants. Trent discovers in Mademoiselle Dupin, Natica's French instructor, a friend of the old criminal days. She is now going straight. Trent is suspicious of a man known as Yeatman, ostensibly in the Grant household as a detective.

"Don't think for a moment that this man is going to bother you or search your trunks. He is here to watch," she remarked.

Mrs. Grant took up the dainty telephone instrument which matched the boudoir furniture. "Thorpe," she commanded, when a voice answered her, "send Mr. Yeatman to me at once." She turned to the unhappy Mademoiselle Dupin. "You have seen the world, tell me what you think of him."

For the moment the "Countess" could not be sure that Mrs. Grant had not prepared the visit of the detective as a trap. It had been brought about so easily, so naturally, that she felt suspicion was justifiable. To seek to evade the man would be, transparently, an evidence of fear.

There was a knock at the door and the man who was known as Mr. Yeatman entered. It was through the mirror that Mademoiselle Dupin first saw him. She had turned her back on him with a caution born of many harrowing interviews. For one fraction of a moment she caught his black eyes bent on her mirrored reflection. It was enough for her to feel a pang of fear. For the moment she could not remember how or where she had met him; but she was certain that she had. And she did not think he was on the side of the law.

Eagerly she listened for his voice. When he spoke it deepened the impression of previous knowledge of him, but brought identification no nearer.

"You are keeping an eye on him?" Mrs. Grant queried.

"He is rarely out of my sight, madame," he answered. "You have, perhaps, new instructions for me?"

"No more than I have already given you." With a nod of her head she dismissed him.

"What do you think of him?" Mrs. Grant asked.

"It was not a favorable impression. You are satisfied that he is genuine?"

"Oh, yes. The creature has his name in the New York telephone directory, an office, a stenographer, and all the rest of it. I went in to see him myself. There is so much ingenuity in the world of crime that one can't be too careful."

"So one hears," murmured Mademoiselle Dupin.

She knew that soon she would be able to place him. It was like going through an old trunk for a misplaced letter. She had known this man and he had been associated with some one of those many incidents outside the law which had made up her life. He had been of the police or a confederate of those for whom she worked. All that had been required of her in those early days in the gay capitals of Europe was that she should look young, remain beautiful, and never lose her heart. The danger of meeting former confederates was as perilous to her now as meeting an agent of police.

It was hardly possible that a quick glance through a mirror would reveal her as the brilliantly lovely girl of eight years before, who had passed as a great heiress in the Riviera.

CHAPTER VI

Mademoiselle Dupin Realizes Her Peril.

"Yeatman is the lesser of two evils," Trent told Mademoiselle Dupin. "He is told to steal, and not to denounce you. I don't see any reason for supposing he knows you are in America, much less in this particular household. It may even be that he is legitimately a detective now. Two things you must not do. One is not to be seen with me, and another is not to run the risk of meeting him. These people with their jewels won't be here more than a week, and then, I suppose, he will go."

"I don't know," she said doubtfully. "Mrs. Grant has a succession of these house parties planned. When do you leave?"

"I don't want to go until I know you're safe," he answered. "And that means I shall stay until Yeatman gets out. The trouble is that we can't yet tell certainly which side he is on now. I'm not one to be able to cast stones. He, too, may have changed."

"No, no!" she cried. "One has to catch but a glimpse of his face to know he is evil. It was something of violence that I half remember about him."

"Take what precautions you can," he reminded her as she rose to go to her lesson, "and remember you can communicate with me through the butler. After all, if it comes to the worst, I don't suppose two more resourceful people than you and I are to be found. I'm not going to see you frightened or hurt by anyone. Remember that I am fighting for you, and my position here is a strongly entrenched one. If anything goes badly, send for me, give me a lead, and I swear I'll get you out of this house with all the honors of war, even if I have to mobilize the Welds and Bentleys to do it."

"I do not think I have ever had a friend like you," she said simply. "In other days, when I seemed to have money and position, it was different, but now, when I am nothing at all—your goodness brings tears to my eyes."

She went hurriedly from the room. Always when she had been talking to Anthony Trent she was filled with courage and hope.

Mademoiselle Dupin knew that while Mrs. Grant needed her for instruction in French she chiefly was anxious to learn the etiquette of these old French families which do not welcome foreigners in their midst.

In the long talks Natica Grant discussed her ambitions freely. She felt she could speak freely, as her teacher had none with whom to gossip. One of her chief grievances against Captain Sutton was that he had not let her know of his enormous wealth until he was about to leave for France.

"And because I did not know," she wailed, "I lived in the wrong places, knew the wrong sort of people and did the wrong sort of things. I could have been received in Newport if he had encouraged me. It would have been easy when I first married. Now

Conceit and Timidity Bars to Advancement

Henry Ward Beecher once called conceit "the most incurable disease known to the human soul."

Conceit, however, is not to be confused with pride, self-respect or self-confidence. There is merit in these qualities and many a man of limited abilities has stamped and pounded his way to the seats of the mighty.

But the conceited man moves in quite a different realm. His is simply an unreasoning, unfounded opinion of his own importance. He is a giant in a world of pygmies.

Many men fail because of timidity and modesty. They secretly tell themselves that they don't amount to much, that they are mediocre and that nobody is interested in their words or deeds. They sink into the hidden recesses of obscurity of complete failure.

There is a sane middle ground upon which those who get anywhere worth while in life must ever stand. Neither conceit nor timidity will carry anyone very far.

Honesty is the best policy even in appraising one's own talents.—Thrill Magazine.

Many in the Running

Some men are born reputed, some achieve reputations and others try hard to get away from theirs.—Boston Transcript.

Duties of other people are always doubly clear to us.

When Mademoiselle Dupin went to her room, stealthily, fearing to encounter Yeatman, she was in possession of many useful facts which placed Natica Grant in a less favorable light.

Now that she was alone she tried to read, so that the hours before sleeping might pass quickly. The printed pages were not able to hold her attention. She was vaguely uneasy. Anthony Trent had told her he would help; but he was downstairs, while she was alone in this upper corridor. She turned out her lights and gazed for almost an hour out at sea. Her ears seemed to catch a hundred harrowing noises in the passage outside.

But her nerves grew taut and the fading courage returned when, out of these vague, confused sounds, there came the definite tapping of hands on her door.

"It has come," she murmured. Then she turned on the lights and flung open the door.

The man who passed by the name of Yeatman stood there. She clung to the hope that he might have come to ask her a few questions which, as a detective, he might find himself expected to do.

"You have something to ask me?" she said, with admirable self-possession.

"Not so loud," said Mr. Yeatman, putting his fingers to his lips. "I have my reputation to think of."

Without appearance of ill-will he pushed past her, closed the door and then crossed to a chair by the window. He lighted a Maryland cigarette and turned to Mademoiselle Dupin.

"You do not recognize me?" he demanded, in French. He was smiling.

The changed intonation and the altered face brought back his name in a flash.

"Pierre Redlich!" she cried. Vividly she called him to mind now. Perhaps she had seen him no more than twice, but they had talked much of him, the men with whom she had long ago been associated. This was the Pierre Redlich who had been a sort of outside man for them. It was his work to warn of the approach of the police. It had been Redlich's misfortune to engage in combat a gendarme with a singularly thin skull. It was cracked like an egg, and Redlich was sent to work for life on a breakwater.

"You do not remember me as I remember you," said Pierre Redlich, breaking the silence. "What was I to you then? Nothing at all. Something not to be considered. If Madame la Princesse Solofsky that season."

"Did you come here to look for me?" There was that perfect command of herself in the moment of danger for which she had been famous. No longer was there fear or hesitation.

"I did not know even that you were here. No. That was the luck which fools call coincidence. We are going to exchange confidences, you and I, and you shall hear why I am here speaking English perfectly who was condemned to life imprisonment knowing only French and my native Flemish."

He took the orange package of Maryland cigarettes and placed it on the white wicker table by the window. Then he removed his coat.

"It is good to be where there is no part to play," he commented. "Here, with a friend, I can be myself."

"Why should you call me friend?"

"I ought to have said rival."

"Even that would not be true."

"You may lie, but it does not deceive me. Why should you be in a house like this if not to rob?"

"I am here earning my living honestly. Are you not here for that purpose?"

Pierre Redlich laughed as he tossed a cigarette-end from the window. "What a woman!" he said admiringly. "I am, indeed, an honest business man and can show you testimonials. But I have waited two years for a chance like this. It has been weary work. And then, when it comes, I find I have a rival. Now, mademoiselle, if you were a man I should have killed you. I am at a stage where I will have no other person come between me and what I want. But you are a woman and a beautiful one." He looked at her with burning eyes.

A FEW UNUSUAL DAINTIES

For a finish to a hearty company dinner nothing will be more tasty than

Coupe Moquin.—Make a sirup by boiling a quart of water with two cupsful of sugar for 20 minutes. Add the grated rind of two oranges and cool, then add two cupsful of orange juice and one-fourth cupful of lemon juice. Strain and freeze to a mush, then add two tablespoonfuls of creme de menthe and continue freezing. Serve in deep sherbet glasses, garnish with bar le due currants.

Walnut Decoits.—To one cream cheese add one-fourth of a cupful of finely minced olives that have been stoned; add a few grains of paprika and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Shape in balls, roll in finely minced walnut meats, flatten each ball and press into it one-half of a walnut meat on each side. Serve as a cheese with the salad course. Arrange on a doily-covered plate and chill before serving.

Richmond Corn Cakes.—To three-fourths of a cupful of canned corn add one-half cupful of milk, one-half tablespoonful of sugar and two well-beaten eggs. Mix and sift seven-eighths of a cupful of flour, one tablespoonful of baking powder and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Combine mixtures, drop by tablespoonfuls in buttered muffin rings and bake in a moderate oven. Serve with roast beef.

When serving a boiled fish, try this sauce:

Huntington Sauce.—Melt three and one-half tablespoonfuls of butter, add three tablespoonfuls of flour and stir until well blended, then pour on gradually, while stirring constantly, one cupful of chicken stock. Bring to the boiling point and add one-half cupful of cream, one-fourth cupful of blanched almonds, shredded, one teaspoonful of beef extract, eight stoned olives cut into quarters, one-half tablespoonful of lemon juice, one-half teaspoonful of salt and a few grains of cayenne.

French Crullers.—Prepare the paste as usual, adding to the flour a tablespoonful of powdered sugar, then to the eggs add the grated rind of half a lemon. Make the crullers by forcing the paste through a pastry tube in the form of rings. Place them on a piece of greased paper just the size of the frying kettle. Let them stand for a few minutes to become crusted over, then invert into the kettle of hot fat. They will leave the paper. Dip in chocolate icing when cool.

For cream puffs drop the mixture and round it to make a round cake, then brush with beaten egg or egg and milk mixed to give the glossy surface, and bake.

Seasonable Foods.

The favorite meat, foods for the summer, are chicken and lamb. The reason lamb is so expensive in most localities is that only the chops and leg of the lamb are desired. Stews of the neck or shoulder served with peas and carrots, make the finest kind of eating. The breast baked with stuffing is also a most desirable dish. No part of the lamb should be refused, as it is all tasty and good when well seasoned.

Lamb Shoulder With Vegetables.—Cut up the meat in serving-sized pieces and brown in a little fat. Place in a baking dish with a cupful or more of diced carrots, an onion or two, adding a little boiling water, season well and bake until the meat is nearly tender enough to serve, then add a few small new potatoes which have been parboiled and peeled; cook until all the vegetables are tender. Serve from the dish or casserole.

An ordinary lamb stew, using one of the cheaper cuts, makes a most delicious meal, adding a pint of green peas long enough to cook them, then thicken the gravy with a little flour and butter cooked together; add seasoning to taste. Serve the meat with the peas and gravy around it. The one thing which seems to be lacking in the average cook is a knowledge of the value of seasoning. The hit-or-miss method of oversalting or undersalting, no tasting of foods while cooking to see if the food needs a bit of this or that, is a grave fault which never can be made too much of.

Half of the people who dislike certain foods have acquired that annoying practice, because those foods have never been cooked, seasoned or served in an attractive way. There is always an excuse for favoring those who are made ill by eating certain foods, a personal idiosyncrasy that should be respected; but the average "finic," made so by early training, should have no quarter. Training in these things should begin with the parents.

Woman Howe Admires

I am specially admiring another woman. She married a half worthless sort of fellow, and not much was expected of her, as she came from a shiftless family and shiftless neighborhood. But she is surprising every one. Her new kin, at first suspicious, are acclaiming her. Her half worthless husband not only loves her, but she is making a man of him. She is the reigning sensation in the little town where she lives, she is so adorable, sensible, womanly and worthy. Her name is Lizzy. I have heard so much about her that I should rather see Lizzy than Ethel Barrymore.—E. W. Howe's Monthly.

BABY DEATH RATE LOW IN CALIFORNIA

Alameda last year had the lowest infant mortality rate—only nine per 1,000 birth—of all the cities of the United States of 10,000 population and upward. The city of Summit, New Jersey, was second, with a rate of fifteen, and Coshocton, Ohio, third with twenty, according to the American Child Health Association's annual report, made public a few days ago.

Berkeley, with a rate of forty-two per thousand, stands third among cities of population of from 50,000 to 100,000. Oakland and Grand Rapids, Michigan, tied for third among cities of population from 100,000 to 250,000.

Here is something for the people of California to be proud, and they may be excused for a little boasting about a climate and conditions which permits this state to make such a splendid showing. We can truly be proud of California for its many blessings, but the fact that it is a good place in which to raise strong and healthy children is one of the best advertisements this state could have. And you can not go back of these figures. They prove conclusively that the infant has a chance for long life and splendid health in this state.

FIGHTING UGLINESS

Commendation is due the state highway authorities of Georgia in connection with a recent resolution prohibiting billboards and other advertising signs along the roadways of the state.

Declaring it to be the policy of the highway board to encourage the preservation of natural beauties along its thoroughfares, as well as to promote the planting of trees and shrubs, the resolution further prescribes "that all advertising signs be prohibited on the right of way, and that the beautifying of the highways be encouraged by the planting of trees and the clearing away of all unsightly objects."

The various women's organizations which are co-operating in the movement for beautification are greatly encouraged by the action of the Georgia authorities and other official bodies throughout the entire country. Forward-looking business men and advertisers are coming to realize that billboards and signs which mar the landscape are detrimental to their business. Some former billboard advertisers are discarding them for this reason.

When we become thoroughly civilized the billboard will not be tolerated in residential sections of towns and cities, nor along the highways.

TO AVOID SLUMPS

Although the idea is not new, a recent magazine article sets forth a plan for preventing periodical business depressions and consequent unemployment, by means of regulating government spending.

Briefly, the plan is that the government should curtail its building activities during "good times," and speed them up to relieve unemployment when private business is at a low ebb.

While apparently sound in theory, it is doubtful whether the plan could ever be put into practice with any marked degree of success. The government, like individuals, wants things when it wants them, and if members of Congress feel that appropriations for this or that are demanded by their constituents at a certain time it is not likely that the funds would be withheld for the purpose of stabilizing conditions.

TO RESTORE HOME OF WASHINGTON'S MOTHER

The home which was purchased by George Washington for his mother in 1772, and which was occupied by her from 1775 to 1789, is to be restored in commemoration of Washington's bi-centennial anniversary, if the plans of the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities can be carried to completion.

The house has had various owners in later years. No one thought much of its importance until 1890, when an agent came to Fredericksburg, Virginia, from Chicago to purchase the house, which it was proposed to take down and set up again at the Columbian Exposition. Mrs. R. C. Beale, the tenant of the place at the time, overheard the conversation and promptly took steps to prevent the removal of the house from Fredericksburg.

Simply furnished, the house of such interesting memories have been thrown open to the public for many years. No general appeal has heretofore been made for money to support it. It is now desired that it shall be put in good repair and restored to its original condition so that the thousands who seek to honor Washington during the bi-centennial year may view the house as it was when he visited it. It is estimated that at least $5,000 is needed for the work, and it should not be at all difficult to raise this sum.

COOLING-OFF TIME

As usual, the period just following presidential nominating conventions is marked by mutterings from those who are dissatisfied with either the platform or candidates of their respective parties.

Third party movements are threatened and the disgruntled give out voluminous interviews airing their grievances. Sometimes a third party really appears in some strength, but only once since the Civil war has such a party changed the normal election result. That was in 1912, when the revolt of the Progressives under Roosevelt caused the election of Wilson.

This year the same talk is heard as of old. In some sections of the Middle West a slight revolt of Republican farmers against Hoover is being predicted for November. In the South a rather noisy group of Democrats are denouncing Smith.

But with fall will come a cooling-off time, and the rank and file will doubtless become reconciled to a large extent, and when they go to the polls in November, most of them will vote as they have always voted—for the party to which they normally belong. Folks are like that.

MORE OIL SWINDLERS

In a recent issue a leading oil journal sounds a warning against a new crop of oil stock swindlers now springing up as a result of the wave of speculation now sweeping the country.

Since the successful prosecution of fake oil promoters at Fort Worth in 1923, this particular brand of swindler has been lying rather low, but he is now emerging in great numbers. By the most plausible and seductive advertising the ignorant sucker is being induced to "invest" in beautifully engraved stock certificates, in the hope of becoming part owner of a roaring "gusher."

The American Mining Congress, reputable oil concerns, bankers and others are doing what they can to warn the public against these crooks, who play on the credulity of the public, but so long as these warnings go unheeded the suckers must pay for their folly.

It is a true saying that "a fool and his money are soon parted." And no one can facilitate the parting more skillfully than a slick oil stock swindler.

HE'S THE WHOLE WORKS

An exchange prints a little story, clipped from an unknown source, which is very good and perhaps also very old. Anyway, it is worth repeating.

It concerns an Omaha jobbing house and a customer merchant in an Iowa cross-roads town. A shipment of goods received by the customer was rejected as unsatisfactory. The jobber prepared to institute suit for collection and wrote to the railroad agent at the village for information about the arrival of the merchandise; to the president of the bank for information concerning the financial standing of their customer; to the mayor of the village asking him to recommend a good lawyer to handle their case; and to the merchant himself, threatening suit, if he did not make payment at once. This reply was received:

"I received your letter telling me I had better pay up. I am the railroad agent here and received the letter you wrote the agent.

"I am the president and sole owner of the local bank and can assure you as to my financial standing.

"As the mayor of the city, I hesitate to refer you to a lawyer, since I am the only member of the bar in this vicinity.

"If I were not the pastor of the only church here, I would tell you to go to hades."

THE DEAD HAND

"Government operation of business lacks imagination and originality. It never creates anything—except jobs. It is a dead hand on initiative."

So reads a paragraph by Merle Thorpe, quoted in the Publisher's Auxiliary. And no matter whether you agree with Thorpe entirely as to government operation of business, there are many publishers and printers who can truly testify that the government in the envelope printing business for half a century has robbed them of hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of work which would have materially helped them to better serve their communities.

This sort of competition on the part of the government is utterly indefensible, particularly for the reason that by doing this work at less than cost the deficit must be made up by the taxpayers, including the printers whose business is injured by this practice.

Colma News Notes

Rob Silva, of Palo Alto, was a recent Colma visitor.

Tom Ryan, of San Francisco, visited at the Minehan horse corrals on Tuesday.

L. Boetto spent last Wednesday visiting friends in Redwood City and Palo Alto.

L. Boetto has made extensive improvements in his barber shop and also in his dry goods store.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Stark and daughter Frances, returned home last week after spending their vacation at Capitola.

Misses Margie and Tessie O'Connor will leave Saturday for the Russian river, where they will spend their vacation.

The many friends of George Burke are glad to see him out again after his recent accident, and wish him a speedy recovery.

Mrs. Nellie Conseiva and daughters Misses Frances and Juliet, old residents of Colma, moved into their new home on San Bruno avenue last week.

Novels that are widely read usually make the best material for the silver screen. "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" is no exception and has a notable cast in the screen version, to be presented at the New Colma Theatre on Thursday and Friday, July 26 and 27.

Mr. and Mrs. Hector Segasti, nee Anna Shindler, are the happy parents of a baby daughter, born last week. Mrs. Segasti is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Shindler. The young couple are receiving the congratulations of their relatives and many friends. Both mother and baby are reported as doing nicely.

TO HOLDERS OF Third Liberty Loan Bonds

The Treasury offers a new 3 3/4 per cent. 12-15 year Treasury bond in exchange for Third Liberty Loan Bonds.

The new bonds will bear interest from July 16, 1928. Interest on Third Liberty Loan Bonds surrendered for exchange will be paid in full to September 15, 1928.

Holders should consult their banks at once for further details of this offering.

Third Liberty Loan Bonds mature on September 15, 1928, and will cease to bear interest on that date.

A. W. MELLON,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Washington, July 5, 1928.

Mr. Giardella, of First avenue, is sporting a Chrysler roadster.

John Garibaldi and Ellard Gouin are spending their vacation at Westwood, Cal.

Mrs. Adelina Cattori and daughter Elizabeth Ann enjoyed a pleasant vacation at Half Moon Bay.

Mrs. Lorraine Wail, who has been ill for the past two weeks, has now recovered, which is good news to her many friends.

Mrs. B. Ottoboni, of Lawndale, and Mr. and Mrs. R. Ottoboni, of Lawrence avenue, are spending their vacation at Boyes Springs.

Mr. and Mrs. Attilio Conseiva and little daughter, formerly of the Nava apartments, moved into the new Conseiva home on the State highway last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Fischer and baby daughter and Bennie Raubrich were dinner guests of Mrs. John Quigley at her home in San Francisco last Sunday.

Don't forget the whist party to be given by Vista Grande Circle No. 253, A. O. F., Wednesday evening, July 25, in Masonic Hall, Daly City, promptly at 9 o'clock. A good time is assured all.

Elenor Conseiva, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Conseiva, has been ill at Mills Memorial hospital in San Mateo. She is now on the road to recovery and her friends hope to see her about soon.

On account of the many requests received for the "Hunchback of Notre Dame," starring Lon Chaney, the New Colma Theatre is pleased to announce they have arranged for the showing of this masterpiece on Wednesday, July 25.

The baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Fischer, of Castle street, was christened in Holy Angels' church by Reverend Father Schenone. She was named Sylvia Matilda Fischer, and the godparents were Miss Katherine Fischer and Benjamin Hubrich, Jr.

Adolph Bertini, proprietor of the National Garage, Claude Catori, manager Bank of Italy, and Henry Fuchs, of Bryant street, left Sunday on a motor trip as far south as Tijuana, Mexico. While in San Diego they will visit George Krehl.

The Barbara Coast, the San Francisco fire, romance of the days when Frisco was the Paris of America. Everyone will want to see "Old San Francisco," at the New Colma Theatre on Monday and Tuesday, July 23 and 24. Dolores Costello is the star.

Members of the Colma Athletic Club bowled last Monday evening at California Hall. Angelo Olcese was winner until the last game, when Henry Bortis walked away with the game. Another big game will be played again this Friday evening.

Richard and George Olcese, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Ricco Olcese, of Augusta street, returned to their parents' home during the early part of the week after spending a very enjoyable vacation of several weeks at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Gouline, at San Bruno.

Each and every day brings something new to write in the pages of aviation history. "The Air Patrol," a drama of the aviator of today, brings one to realize the importance of aviation in every day life. Incidentally, Art Goebel, winner of the Dole Hawaiian race, has his place of honor in this drama above the clouds, showing at the New Colma Theatre, Saturday, July 21.

On Saturday afternoon, July 14, Mrs. Romilda Grondona announced the engagement of Miss Teresa Stampanoni at a tea in the Palm Court room at the Palace Hotel. The table was beautifully decorated with different favors and flowers, consisting of a beautiful spray of corsages of baby roses, which was placed in the center of the table. Each corsage was distributed among the guests after the tea. Among those who enjoyed the tea were Teresa Stampanoni, Mrs. A. Stampanoni, Romilda Grondona, Jeannette Pearson, Sylvia Paille, Irene Moresco, Hilda Demartini, Anita Varni, Armeta Bono, Mrs. L. Lazzari, Louise Silicani, Louise Arragona and Estella Packwood.

Misses Edna Boyle and Annette Lucey entertained the members of La Fiesta Social Club at the home of Miss Boyle, in Crocker Tract, last Friday evening. After the business meeting a delicious spread was served to the following members: Audrey Diamond, Tessie O'Connor, Callista Dalton, Sarah Batini, Laura Figone, Christine Hume, Florence McKendrick, Sylvia Fischer, Margie O'Connor, Elsie Fahey, Annette Lucey and Edna Boyle. Miss Julia Hinkie was an invited guest. Miss Laura Figone sang several songs and all joined in the chorus. An Apache dance was presented by Tessie O'Connor and Audrey Diamond and was much enjoyed by all. The next of these enjoyable meetings will be held at the home of Miss Sarah Batini.

ICE CREAM INDUSTRY

It is said that ice cream was invented by a French cook, Di Miro, for the delectation of Charles I of England. It was nearly two centuries after that when Dolly Madison introduced it to guests at the White House in Washington, where she presided as the wife of the fourth president of the United States. Still another century elapsed before ice cream became an article of diet available to the rank and file.

Today half a billion dollars is invested in ice cream manufacturing plants and nearly ten million dollars a year is spent by the industry for advertising. Five billion pounds of milk or its equivalent are used in ice cream manufacture annually. In 1905 the per capita consumption of ice cream in the United States was about one gallon; now it is nearly three gallons.

As an official of the ice cream manufacturers' association recently said, "ice cream is no longer looked upon as a confection or a luxury; it is considered a wholesome, nourishing and essential food in the diet of the American people."

The increasing recognition of the high food value and healthfulness of ice cream, as well as milk and milk products generally, accounts in a large measure for the rapid rise of the dairy industry in the United States—an industry which is doing much to solve the problems of agriculture by affording a new and dependable source of cash income for the farmer.

NEW 'BRITISH "ZOO"

By a rather novel plan adopted by the Empire Marketing Board, merchandise of British manufacture will be designated by a sort of trademark, whereby articles manufactured in various countries of the Commonwealth will be designated by appropriate animal designs.

According to the scheme proposed goods originating in the United Kingdom will be indicated by the picture of a lion, Australia by a kangaroo, New Zealand by a kiwi, India by an elephant, South Africa by a springbok, West Africa by an alligator, Southern Rhodesia by a rhinoceros, Southern India by a tiger, the Malay by a tiger, and Canada by a beaver.

It is believed that this innovation will have considerable advertising value and tend to stimulate a demand for products of the various countries of the Commonwealth.

For the benefit of those who may not know, it may be said that the kiwi is a flightless bird, about the size of a hen, having hair-like plumage and a long, slender beak, and found only in New Zealand. The South African springbok is a kind of gazelle, or antelope, very graceful and swift in its movements.

A somewhat distorted idea of India's elephant may be gained by observing American political cartoon during the next few months.

SPREAD OF 4-H CLUBS

Last year 619,712 American boys and girls better fitted themselves for rural community life and leadership through 4-H Club activities, under the co-operative direction of the Extension Service of the Department of Agriculture.

Of the total number enrolled, nearly 400,000 completed the tasks or projects assigned to them, according to reports received from 2,622 county extension agents throughout the country.

Addressing 148 champion farm boys and girls at the national club camp recently held in Washington, Dr. C. B. Smith, chief of co-operative extension work, stated the purpose of the clubs to be that of aiding rural boys and girls in improving farm and home practices and in broadening the social life of their communities; in making them appreciate the possibilities of rural life and helping them to become efficient framers and homemakers, and training them for leadership in their local districts.

The members are taught to "work together, counsel together, play together, co-operate and achieve."

There is no doubt that one of the foremost needs of rural people is better co-operation among themselves. Club work teaches boys and girls how to co-operate.

Street Car Fares Increased

Street railways in Sacramento and Stockton have been authorized to boost their fares for a single ride to 7 cents, in a decision made public by the State Railroad Commission. A dissenting opinion was handed down by Commissioner William J. Carr. The Stockton Electric railway will increase its fare from 6 to 7 cents, and the Sacramento system, owned by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, from 5 to 7 cents.

AIRCRAFT REGULATION IS UNDER DISCUSSION

More than sixty representatives of aircraft operating companies and other interested organizations attended the preliminary conference held at the office of the Railroad Commission last Tuesday, to discuss the general problem of aircraft regulation in California. This conference was called by Carl I. Wheat, attorney for the Railroad Commission, at the request and direction of the commission, in order that a definite program for legislation relating to aircraft may be perfected prior to the next session of the California legislature.

All of the larger aircraft carrier companies were represented and in addition there were present the chairman and several members of the special committee on public utility law of the California State Bar, the directors of the San Francisco and Oakland municipal airports, representatives of American Railway Express (already a large aircraft carrier), the important railroad companies, and certain of the stage lines of the state, and a number of persons definitely interested in the development of air transportation who are not directly connected with operating aircraft lines.

The consensus of opinion expressed in the general discussion at this meeting was that legislation for the regulation of aircraft in California is imminent and that a careful study should be made leading to the drafting of bills to be presented to the next legislature, covering, first, the licensing and general regulation of all pilots and aircraft operating within the state of California, and second, the regulation of common carrier aircraft companies operating under the jurisdiction of the Railroad Commission.

The appointment of a small committee to work out the details of these problems was authorized by those present at the meeting.

WOULD HAVE RACE TRACK SUBDIVIDED FOR HOMES

The Burlingame Advance seems to think the days of Tanforan race track are numbered, and that there is a possibility of the famous track being cut up into building lots. The Advance says:

"The fate of the Tanforan race track is hanging in the balance.

"Tempted by the offers of real estate subdivision promoters to buy the valuable acreage and replace the grandstand, stables and track with homes, officials of the California Jockey Club today are wavering, according to reliable information obtained by the Advance.

"Whether to keep the home stretch or to have a stretch of homes is the question.

"Adverse decisions on oral betting and an adverse decision against the Illinois method of allowing track wagers, are causing owners of the valuable holding to give an attentive ear to a proposal of subdividing the famous racing course.

"E. R. Cotton, representing leaders of the California Jockey Club, and said to be spokesman for the Spreckles interests, has announced that the next legislature may legalize betting and pass a measure allowing pari-mutual machines and racing wagers at the Tanforan and other California tracks.

"If club officials believe that favorable legislation can be enacted, horse racing will be revived at Tanforan. On the other hand, if it is decided that the case is hopeless, the world famed Tanforan track will probably be cut up into a high class realty subdivision and homes will replace the buildings which represent a million dollar investment."

"BEN HUR" COMING TO THE STATE THEATRE NEXT WEEK

During the coming week those who have contracted the habit of attending the performances at the State Theatre will be provided with some excellent pictures. This Saturday, July 21, the feature picture will be "Stand and Deliver," in which Rod La Rocque and Lupe Velez have the leading roles. The dainty juvenile entertainers will also be present.

On Sunday there will be two pictures, either one of which is worth the price of admission, Charles Murray and George Sidney in "Flying Romeos," one of the best comedies of the season, and Jack Liden in "Shoot-in' Irons."

On Monday and Tuesday, July 23 and 24, that much talked of picture, "The Show-down," in which George Bancroft and Evelyn Brent are the leading actors, will be presented.

"Ben Hur," that wonderful picture of General Lew Wallace's classic, and hailed as the world's greatest dramatic masterpiece, will be presented for three days, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, July 25, 26 and 27. "Ben Hur" is a picture that everyone should see.

DIES FROM BLOOD POISONING

A small infection resulting in blood poisoning on Wednesday morning caused the death of Dr. August E. Shugren, well known member of San Mateo Post No. 82, American Legion, and proprietor of the Beresford kennels on El Camino real. Dr. Shugren was ill but a few days, death being sudden and a shock to relatives and friends, who were not aware of the serious turn in his condition.

A HELPFUL CONDUCTOR

On Saturday afternoon, July 14, I had occasion to telephone to my son, a boy aged 12 years, and asked him to come down town at once as the doctor wished to see him. He replied: "Father, I have no money." I told him what to do.

He carried out instructions and went down to the starting point at Daly City, and explained his position to the conductor, who at once gave the boy free transportation to Fifth and Market. I feel so grateful for this service and act of courtesy that I was desirous of seeing that conductor to personally thank him, but failing to do so, I applied to that genial and painstaking information man, Meisl, at Fifth and Market, and I ascertained through him that the conductor is named Bedford, run 6 the 18 line. I wish to bring this case before your notice and express my appreciation for the helpfulness of Conductor Bedford, and quote in the words of Robert Louis Stevenson:

"So long as we love, we serve; so long as we are loved by others I would almost say we are indispensable; and no man is useless while he has a friend."

Will you convey my thanks to the man who proved himself a friend to my son.

Yours very truly,

A. L. McNAIR.

NEW LION CLUB PRESIDENT

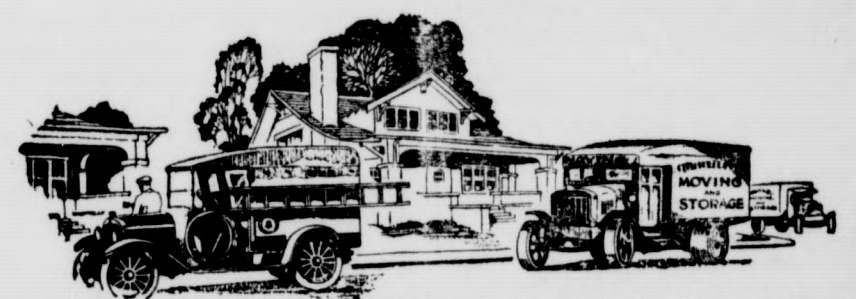

Benjamin A. Ruffin was elected president of the International Association of Lions Clubs at the last session of the twelfth annual convention of the Association, held in Des Moines, Iowa, July 10 to 13. Mr. Ruffin was born and raised in Richmond, Virginia, which has always been his home.

The new president of the Lions International is engaged in the general insurance business and is a partner of one of the leading firms of architects of the city, and also a director of many other companies. He is the author of various insurance papers and insurance forms which have been adopted by the American Bankers' Association and has spoken before many bankers' conventions in various states.

Mr. Ruffin has been associated with Lions International for a number of years, and due to his pleasing personality and eloquent oratorical ability, he has been constantly in demand as a speaker at district conventions, charter nights and everywhere Lions have gathered.

THREE SAN MATEO COUNTY MEN CHOSEN FOR JURY

Three San Mateo county men are members of the hurriedly organized grand jury which started to function Wednesday in San Francisco. They are Robert B. Bostwick, Burlingame, Randolph W. Madison, San Mateo, and Harry A. Bruce, Atherton. The new grand jury was ordered drawn by Federal Judge A. F. St. Sure, on the suggestion of Marshal Fred Escala, who declares that a large number of defendants are languishing in jail, unable to provide bail to appear in court.

Photographic apparatus that will register the emotions of children subjected to various stimuli has been developed at the University of California.

The Democratic convention's harmony was slightly marred by the four bands playing different tunes at the same time.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

Demands of California anti-vivisectionists for the ousting of Dr. Wilbur Selle, physiology instructor at the Santa Barbara State Teachers' College, on charges of cruelty to animals, were disclosed last week at the Governor's office. Governor Young has received fifty or more communications, it was announced, asking immediate dismissal of Dr. Selle on the allegation that he recently performed experimental operations on a small dog and then left the wounded animal tied up in a garage.

Throwing down the gauntlet of competition to existing railroad systems the Western Pacific Railroad a few days ago announced far-reaching transportation plans involving $13,500,000 and affecting San Francisco and peninsula traffic. Through a subsidiary, the Western Pacific California Railroad Company, the transportation system will gain a new all-rail entrance to San Francisco for its transcontinental system and become an active competitor in the peninsula traffic.

Tax collections for the fiscal year 1926 decreased $74,776,244.29 under 1927, the Treasury Department announced a few days ago at Washington. More than half of the loss was from income taxes, which fell off $45,455,965.92, income tax collections for 1928 being $2,174,496,477.80, against $2,219,952,433.72 for 1927. Receipts from miscellaneous taxes also showed a decrease to the extent of $29,320,278.37. California's income tax was $114,189,324.83, and collections $137,232,419.65.

Unless California and visiting tourists want to undergo the embarrassment of reloading their camp equipment at the roadside they will keep the loads placed on car running boards within the limits prescribed by law. Frank G. Snook, chief of the State division of motor vehicles, declared last week. Snook has issued orders to his traffic officers to enforce the law setting the hub cap line as the limit width for loads on the left running boards and six inches as the limit width for loads on the right side.

California's permanent automobile license plate color combination will be black and orange, the same colors selected for the 1929 plates. This is the announcement by A. R. Heron, State director of finance, of whose department the State motor vehicle department is a division. In each succeeding year, he said, the colors will be reversed. While the color combination for 1929 will be a black background with orange letters, in 1930 it will be an orange background with black letters. California will alternate in its colors with New York, which has the same color combination and practically an identical style of plate.

State Treasurer Charles G. Johnson reports earnings of $6,555,236 in interest on State money deposited with banks throughout California during the last five years. This was declared to be $4,270,527.77 in excess of similar interest earnings during any like period in the history of the State Treasury. "California receives the highest rate of interest on its idle money of any State in the Union," says the announcement. In addition to the interest revenues obtained, idle funds are of tremendous value to the agricultural and industries activities throughout the State, the money being deposited in 463 banks in every section of California.

Estimates made by county clerks to Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan indicate the registration for the August 28th primary election in California will set a new record. Charles Hagerly, election statistician in Jordan's office, announced a few days ago that the registration is expected to reach 2,057,600, the figure fixed by the county clerks in ordering booklets containing the declarations of candidacy and the sponsor lists for the primary. The registration for the primary election in 1926 totaled 1,854,471 and that for the general election in the same year was 1,912,862. Registration for the August primary closes July 28th.

More than $25,000,000 has been advanced to California veterans of the World War for the purchase of homes and farms by the State veterans' welfare board during the past six years. This is shown in figures announced a few days ago by George M. Stout, secretary of the board. Actual investments to the end of the fiscal year on June 30th amounted to $24,447,998.04. In addition, there are other loans aggregating $1,000,000 which have been approved by the board but which are being held in escrow awaiting the completion of buildings or other details connected with the transactions. At the present time there are 5,167 veterans actually holding contracts with the veterans' boards for the purchase of homes and farms.

California's unemployment problem is lessening, as it usually does in mid-summer, but a statement issued a few days ago by the State Department of Industrial Relations declares that "many anxious to work in the industrial centers are without employment." Aluminum or other bright metal automobile license plate holders have come under the disapproval of the State Motor Vehicle Department. Frank G. Snook holds that these lower visibility of the number on the plates. Black plate holders or others of a neutral color will be approved, he said.

Elder, Track Star, Is Sparing of Words

Jack Elder, fleet sprinter of Notre Dame, and one of the school's most promising candidates for the Olympic team, is a word miser.

Elder's tactfulness was demonstrated after he had tied the world's record for the 75-yard dash at the Illinois relays.

Upon returning to the gym quarters, a teammate on the rubbing table asked Elder how he came out.

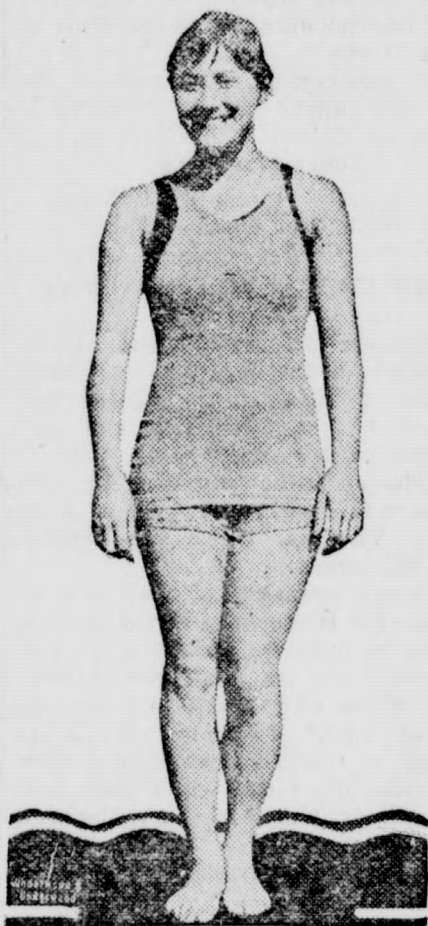

"First," replied the runner. "Good! What was the time?"

"Seven two-fifths."

"What's the record?"

"That's it."

Garrati Is Winner

The photograph shows Eleanor Garrati of the San Rafael club, who assured her place on the U. S. Olympic Swimming team by winning the 100-meter swimming trophy held at San Francisco, in 1 min. 12 2-5 secs. Miss Garrati also holds the national records for the 100-meter swim and the 50-yard swim.

Sporting Squibs

Although John L. Sullivan never lectured on Shakespeare, he always brought home the bacon.

Penn State and Notre Dame will play the third of a three-game agreement at Franklin field on November 3.

It's almost got so that nobody thinks much of the great wide open spaces unless they are wide enough to make a golf course.

Not only his clothes, but almost anything else in the line of sporting goods owned by a young man can be used by his sister—and is.

Often the neighbors think the family next door has moved when it's just a case of a golf hand being the husband of a bridge fiend.

Steve Hamas, Penn State athlete, made letters in four sports during the last year. He will receive the "S" in football, basketball, boxing and track.

Instituted way back in 1715, the annual sculling race on the Thames for Doggett's coat and badge is reputed to be the oldest continuous sporting contest in the world.

Ace Hudkins, who has been under suspension in Wisconsin since December 9, 1924, for failure to carry out a contract, has been reinstated by the Wisconsin boxing commission.

Gene Tunney says that moral beauty is even greater than intellectual beauty, but into which class falls the "right-to-cross-to-the-point-of-the-jaw" the champion fails to state.

Although Doctor Wilce was a success at Ohio State, there are many men who can do as well or better in the coaching line. They admit it, generally from their seats in the stadium at the football games.

Another improvement in golf is the yellow ball which is recommended because of its greater visibility. This should be quite popular with the duffer who has so much trouble in keeping his eye on the white one.

Girl Chums Elope; Husbands Roommates

Boston.—Two girl chums, Dorothy Kimball of West Newton and Jacqueline Abbott of Brookline, stole a march on their friends and eloped to New York secured marriage licenses and were married in the Little Church Around the Corner. Their husbands are also chums and roommates.

The Kimball girl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Kimball of 212 Chestnut street, West Newton, was married to Frank R. Connell, Jr., of 24 Walker street, Cambridge. He is a native of Minneapolis and a graduate of the University of Minnesota.

The Abbott girl was married to Charles B. Findlater, a student at the Harvard school of architecture. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip S. Abbott of Longwood Towers, Brookline. Miss Abbott is a graduate of the Choate School for Girls.

FEET HIS HANDS, TOES HIS FINGERS

Defies Normal Limitations of Mankind.

Berlin.—Artist, juggler and newspaperman, Carl Herrmann Unthan is one of the world's wonders. On April 5, he was eighty years old. During all this span he has been defying the normal limitations of mankind.

For Herr Unthan was born without arms, seemingly condemned to a life of helpless misery. Instead of which, the victim of chance has led a brilliant and prosperous life. He developed his feet and made them serve nearly all the purposes of hands. This eighty-year-old cripple shaves himself, runs a typewriter with his toes, has figured on the variety stages of the entire world, renowned as armless violin player, juggler and actor.

Some years ago he was a familiar figure in the United States. As he grew older he retired from the stage and since then has been ceaselessly active as a writer on theatrical subjects for various newspapers.

When a Berlin reporter called upon him there had been a small tragedy in the little flat where he has lived for many years with an old servant girl, Peppi, for the "gracious sir" had that morning cut his toe with a razor while shaving. Nevertheless, the reporter found him sitting before his typewriter whose keys were clicking merrily under light blows of his marvelous and prehensile toes. The reporter shook the old man's foot and was motioned to a chair, where he sat and heard the entire story of this miraculous triumph of will over destiny. For at birth Herr Unthan's feet were no more adapted for hand work than those of anyone else.

Maimed Vet Kills Self With Odd Contraption

Kansas City, Mo.—Mrs. Lucy Minor removed a letter from her mail box recently. It was from her son, Harry Minor, a World War veteran, who had been a cripple for years as result of wounds.

"I'll be dead when you read this," the letter said.

Investigation revealed her son had followed a complicated but highly methodical system of committing suicide.

Minor's body was found in a sitting position in a rocking chair, a rifle bullet wound in his head.

The rifle was supported on a pile of clothing. From the trigger a wire ran to an ice pick stuck in the wall, then to the rocker of the chair in which he sat.

The rifle was aimed at his head as he sat in the chair and his rocking caused a tension on the wire which pulled the trigger.

Minor was a victim of shell shock and was paralyzed from the waist down as the result of wounds received in action. His ill health and a recent separation from his wife are believed to have been the causes of his suicide.

Burglars in Britain Average $3.50 Weekly

London.—Assertion by Sir William Greaves Lord, K. C., of Manchester, that the average income of burglars in England is only about $3.50 a week has started a discussion throughout the country on the earnings of thieves.

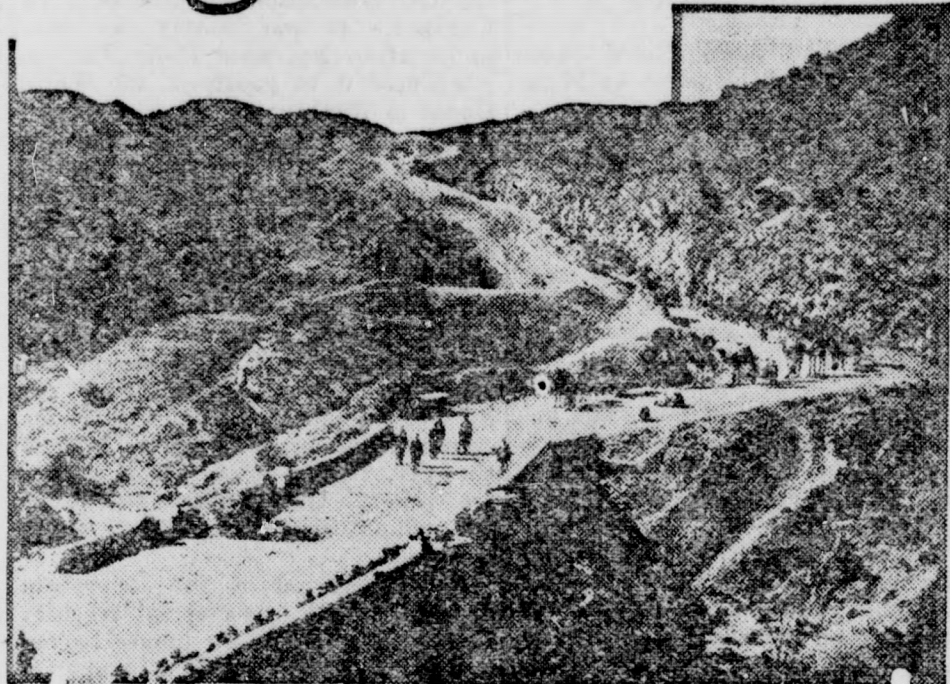

The police believe Sir William underestimates them. In making his estimate he allowed for the time the average thief or robber spends in prison.

Detectives estimate that clever porch climbers and other burglars in the larger cities average perhaps $60 to $70 per week. The best paid are the crack burglars who rob homes of the wealthy. Conscience men are next. The poorest money getters are the pickpocket and the motor thief. The ordinary pickpocket, they estimate, makes $20 to $30 a week.

Afghanistan

A Caravan in the Khyber Pass.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

AFGHANISTAN, one of the most secluded of the larger countries of Asia, has come more into world consciousness in recent months than ever before because of the visit of its king and queen to Europe. Until this occasion these monarchs had never been outside their native land, and their trip through Europe was made up of a series of amazing adventures. A journey by an American through Afghanistan would be little less amazing.

Authorities differ as to the exact origin of the Afghans, but the old theory that they are of Semitic extraction is now discredited; it seems more probable that they are merely a mixture of Turanian tribes, developed here through many centuries of raids, migrations, and tribal changes.

In physical appearance the Afghan is a sort of Turco-Iranian type, the minor tribal divisions in the east of the country showing also a mixture of Indian blood. (The name "Afghan," or "Agwan," is of comparatively recent usage.)

The culture of the country is largely Persian; but an eager desire for learning is innate in every Afghan, and of late years not only Indian, but also British, culture and customs have begun to influence the better classes of the people.

The Afghans call their language "Pushtoo." For official matters, however, the Persian idiom is used and understood over most of the country. The Turkish and Mongolian tribes in western and central Afghanistan speak their own tongues. The ruling Amir knows Persian, some Pushtoo and Turkish.

Foreign newspapers, most of them coming from India, are most carefully read at the Amir's court, where they are translated by hired students trained in India. The Amir delights in illustrated newspapers and is himself a fairly good photographer.

Jealous of Harem.

The Afghan is notoriously jealous of his harem, and few, indeed, are the men of the outside world who have ever looked on the face of an Afghan woman of the twines. With the desert women, wives and daughters of the nomads, it is different; the Koran permits them to go unveiled. The breaking of this custom by the queen on her recent journey was deplored by many Moslems.

The Afghan works no more than is absolutely necessary to make his living. The upper classes consider it their privilege to exploit the poor, and the burden of taxation is very heavy.

As for entertainment, the people, especially the wealthy, are fond of games and of sports. Hunting, horse-racing, wrestling matches, and gymnastic games are popular. Recently, football and tennis have been adopted by the upper-class youngsters of Kabul. Ram fights, cock-fighting, and even fights between male quail, are favorite diversions, and throughout all Afghanistan dancing is indulged in and the public declamation of ballads is warmly applauded.

Every better-class Afghan owns a piano, imported from Bombay, which he plays with one finger, keeping his foot on the long pedal constantly. When an outsider plays for them, using ten fingers at a time, they are overcome with amazement and admiration. A tale is told of one man at Kabul who sawed the legs off his grand piano, so that he might play it while sitting on the floor, Afghan fashion.

Costumes vary in different parts of the country. In the East the garments approach the Indian style, and of late years a few natives have even appeared in European dress. A decade ago the Amir introduced European uniforms and suits for himself and his whole staff of officials.

European hats and uniforms of all styles, imported in quantities from India, are often worn in the most singular combinations.

The typical national dress of the Afghan consists of a long-tailed calico shirt, white pants, leather shoes or boots, and a tanned sheep-skin coat elaborately embroidered with yellow silk; this coat is sometimes replaced by a long toga of red cloth.

Three kinds of headgear are customary. Some wear a low, many-colored cap; others a blue or white turban, which is frequently gold-embroidered with a flap hanging down behind to protect the neck from the sun. In some provinces men wear the kullah, a colored cap that looks like a Turkish fez, which widens toward the top. In the house and at work women wear long calico shirts, wide, colored pants like the men, and head-cloths above gold-embroidered caps. Their street dress consists of long, wide pants and a blue or black overdress, the costume being completed by a loose garment that covers the head and upper part of the body, just allowing the eyes to look through a latticed insert like a strip of mosquito bar. The feet are stuck in large red slippers.

Meager Bill of Fare.

The bill of fare of the Afghan is very simple and reflects the poverty of the country. Bread, fruits, vegetables, tea, sweet milk, sour milk, and cheese are the main foods. Rice, mutton, fowl, and sweets cooked in various ways are found on the tables of the well-to-do. The average Afghan has no particular fondness for wine or spirits.

Tobacco raised in the land is of inferior quality; the better sorts are imported from Russia, India and Egypt. The Amir Habibullah Khan always had a good private stock of Havana cigars. Both young and old people take snuff.

Tea, sweetened and unsweetened, is the favorite drink and is consumed in prodigious quantities. When you go to see an Afghan, you can hardly escape before swallowing four or five cupsful of tea; it is, therefore, no trifling gastronomic feat to pay several visits in one afternoon, the more so if the polite host (with a view of honoring the western guests) has the tea served in big Russian glasses.

The right hand is always used in eating and drinking, the left hand being considered unclean.

Dogs, though numerous and useful, are looked upon as unclean, and pious people never touch them.

Animals that go badly lame on the march or camels that get snowbound in the mountain passes are abandoned to their fate. Afghans never kill such animals, as we might do, to put them out of their misery. They believe that the lives of all living things are in the hands of Allah, and that man sins if he presumes to interfere with the supreme will. Afghans will not even kill fleas or other vermin; they merely pick them off and throw them away!

The trade of Afghanistan is moved entirely by caravans and is largely in the hands of Hindus and Tadzhiks. The chief route lies through the famous Khyber pass, the great gateway from India, which has been fortified by the British government.

This pass is open every week, on Tuesdays and Fridays, except in very hot weather, when it is available to trade only on Fridays. A most rigid scrutiny is exercised by the Amir's agents on all who come and go. As soon as caravans from India enter the country, their Indian leaders are turned back and heavily-armed Afghan guides take their places.

Caravans Well Regulated.

Some of these Afghan caravans, organized with military precision, number thousands of camels and a proportionate number of guides and camel-drivers. In the morning the Khyber pass is open for caravans coming into Afghanistan, and in the afternoon for those routed in the opposite direction. The pass is absolutely closed between sun-down and sun-up.

Along all the caravan trails in the country are good, solid caravansaries, built of stone and clay, situated about a day's march from each other.

The most important caravan roads leading out of Afghanistan, are: In the west, from Herat to Meshed; in the north, from Maimana and Akcha to Kerk; in the east, from Kabul to Peshawar, and in the south from Kandahar to Quetta.

Important cities like Kabul, Kandahar, Herat, Maimana and Mazari-Sharif are connected by fairly good caravan roads, which, over various long stretches, can be used by motor cars. The Amir has good motor roads built in and around Kabul to link up his palaces.

Owing to the aggressive pursuit and harsh punishment meted out by the Amir's troops, the once famous robbers of the Afghan hills have almost disappeared, so that caravans, even in the desert districts, can now travel in safety; but in some provinces near the borders constant quarrels and raids are going on among hostile tribes.

Vast Quantities of Water Under Earth

The quantity of water underground, beneath the crust of the earth's surface is nearly one-third the total volume of the oceanic waters, according to estimates of Dr. Chester A. Reeds, of the American Museum of Natural History, New York, who has just completed investigations of buried rivers and caves. The earth's ground water extends to great depths, perhaps six miles, and has been accumulating for countless ages. This great mass of water percolates slowly through the porous and jointed rocks to form great systems of underground drainage, creating such beauty spots as Mammoth cave in Kentucky and the Endless caverns in Virginia. In the limestone regions, where so many of these unfamiliar streams are found, the formations of huge stalactites, stalagmites, columns, and stony curtains in the cavernous depths remind one of the artistic handwork of ancient artisans on the Renaissance palaces.

Tribute Not Heavy

The republic of Andorra has just paid its annual tribute of 1,400 francs (about $56) to its two "co-princes," the president of France and the bishop of Urgel, Spain. For 649 years Andorra has paid tribute and enjoyed undisturbed sovereignty in its mountain valley. It became a republic in 1806. Andorra claims about 5,200 inhabitants.

LEADERS SET EXAMPLE

An example of public spirit which might well be emulated by other industrial leaders was shown recently by five citizens of Alabama in connection with a movement for advertising the resources of the state.

In pursuance of an act of the legislature an Industrial Commission was appointed by Governor Graves, with an appropriation of $100,000 for a four years' advertising campaign. Deeming this inadequate, the five commissioners, who serve without salary and pay their own expenses, personally donated $20,000 each, or a total of $100,000, to the fund, duplicating the amount furnished by the state.

Their action is good evidence that the governor made no mistake in his selection of the personnel of the commission, which is composed of Thos. W. Martin, president of the Alabama Power Company, George G. Crawford, president of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company; Theodore Swan, Lindley Morton and Benjamin Russell, capitalists.

In every state captains of industry are performing similar services for their communities, and it might be well for the public to make note of the fact occasionally and give credit where it is due. Such men do more for the upbuilding of the country than the soap-box orators in and out of Congress who would tear down the business structure which has been erected through the efforts of able and industrious citizens.

HERE IS A REAL JOB FOR A VENTURESOME HE-MAN

If you have aspirations to do something wild and dangerous, try to do something useful instead of drowning on a trans-Atlantic flight; or catching cold, dust and dirt on top of a flagpole. Here is a real job for adventurous spirits: Climb to the top of Mount McKinley and bring back the self-registering thermometer left on the peak fifteen years ago by Harry Karstens, superintendent of McKinley National Park. He wants to know how cold it really got at the elevation of 20,300 feet in Alaska. He suspects that the thermometer will reveal temperatures lower than any recorded outside of a laboratory, but he won't be sure until that thermometer is back. So get your ice pick and start.

The trip to the top was made by Karstens and two others in the summer of 1913. Nobody has been able to reach the peak before or since. Applicants please line up on the left. A nickel-plated ice pick will be given the winner.—Sunset Magazine.

NO OBSTACLE IN THE WAY OF AMBITION

The candidates for President and Vice-President chosen by the opposing national political parties represent the flowering of an ideal in government aiming at an equality of opportunity for every citizen. They illustrate the working out of a constitutional form of government which for 152 years has encouraged private initiative and enterprise instead of crushing individual ambition with the iron hand of officialism seeking to enforce paternalistic control over the lives of a people.

No matter what ticket is elected in November, it will be a victory for those principles of equality and democracy, without class or privilege, which are the basis on which our Constitution rests. The people will choose between men who are of the people in the truest sense of the term, and have the deep understanding of the national heart that makes for progress and good government.

Underlying the battle for the Presidency of our country are two types of leadership in both parties—leaders like Hoover, sprung from the small country communities, and leaders like Smith, who struggled up from the multitudes in a great city.

The inception of the United States of America marked the end of that popular stupidity of the "Divine Right of Kings" and established the first successful government in history where a man is judged solely on his merits and not by his blood.

When Herbert Hoover worked his way through college by driving a laundry wagon, and Alfred Smith sold papers on New York's East Side to help support a widowed mother, they were developing the character and proving the ability that was to place one of them in the most important executive position in the world. And they were given their opportunities to succeed by a principle of government that recognized that such men, in whom apparent misfortune had created qualities of greatness and sympathy, might be infinitely more capable of ruling a nation than the guarded first sons of some favored monarch.

It is in the high honors paid such men that America is seen as the land of opportunity. The people rule, through the sovereignty of the ballot, by selecting to official authority men of simplicity and strength, men who have made their own climb from poverty and obscurity to positions of power and responsibility, men who appreciate our constitutional rights and privileges.

Business, industry and the individual have a feeling of security when they see the traditions and ideals of our country carried forward and strengthened by recognition of ability, ambition and enterprise. The greatest freedom for the individual, coupled with absolute security of private property rights, is a foundation principle of our government.

Skeptics have been inclined to think that these cardinal principles are being lost sight of, but periodically the people, by voicing their opinion through the ballot, recognize outstanding men who typify the American ideal which stands for simplicity in government in line with constitutional rights so dear to the American people.

The greatest heritage of every American is his right to start with nothing and work toward the highest rewards in our political, industrial and business life. Every field is open to every man and woman. This is the priceless heritage our forefathers handed down to us, and it should be jealously guarded.

In the United States there is no obstacle in the way of any worthy ambition. These men in the Presidential race, mounting each by his own efforts, and as the chosen leaders of great parties—this is high romance breathing still the adventurous spirit of American beginnings. So long as the people choose of their own so wisely, we may be sure that the heart of America is sound.—The Manufacturer.

TELEPHONE SUBSCRIBER MAY NOW REACH FARTHEST NORTH

Telephone connection for American subscribers reached a new "farthest north" with the extension of trans-Atlantic telephone service to Oslo, Norway, on Friday, July 6, it is announced by the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company. The Norwegian capital, which has figured prominently in organizing relief expeditions for Nobile and Amundson, is itself only 30 degrees from the North Pole in a corresponding latitude to the upper part of Hudson Bay in North America.

The hours of service will include the period from 2:30 a. m. to 6 p. m. Pacific Standard Time, which will correspond to 11:30 a. m. to 3 a. m. in Norway. The city of Oslo, with a population of 250,000, has a remarkably high development of 43,000 telephones, or over seventeen per 100 population. Its distance from London by telephone line is approximately 1,400 miles, the route passing across Holland, Germany and Sweden.

With the inclusion of Oslo for trans-Atlantic service, telephone calls may be placed from the United States, Cuba and the principal cities of Canada and Mexico to all three Scandinavian countries, service having been previously extended to Stockholm and Gothenburg, Sweden, early this year, and to Copenhagen, Denmark, and Malmo, Sweden, within the past few weeks.

The 4-H clubs might add to their membership by enlisting some of those who have been sojourning in Hot Happy Hospitable Houston.

BRET HARTE NOT A DEAD-EYE DICK

Despite the claim of numerous biographies and the popular belief that Bret Harte must have experienced personally the "Hell-roarin'" life of California's gold rush days in order to have written about it so well, there are no authentic records to show that he was ever other than a literary, dandified, and urbane, not to say lady-like personage, according to Assistant Professor George R. Stewart, Jr., of the University of California English department.

In the latest issue of the University Chronicle, Professor Stewart, who has made a study of Bret Harte's career, takes issue with the claims of biographers concerning the romantic flavor of Harte's early life, and declares that there are no authentic proofs of his ever having been a "rip-roaring, two-gun, red-shirted, Jesse-James-and-Dead-eye-Dick hellion."

Professor Stewart cites five claims of biographers which he finds more or less legendary: That Harte served as a soldier against the Indians; that he was a tax collector in the mines; that he was a gun-guard or express messenger for Wells-Fargo; that he had experience as a miner; and that he traveled widely for a considerable time through the mining districts.

Of these claims he says that: The first two have no foundation in facts. If he worked for the Wells-Fargo, it was probably as a weigher of packages or a balancer of books. His experience as a miner could probably be counted in days rather than in months. His travel through the mining districts was probably confined to a two months excursion looking for a school to teach, with perhaps a little amateur work with a mining pan.

His time was spent, Professor Stewart finds, rather in tutoring, teaching, clerking for an apothecary, helping in a newspaper office, and practicing writing. His material for story writing was probably gleaned from newspaper exchanges and from acquaintances who had mining experience. Even Harte's own statements concerning his youth do not check up with known facts, and were probably an excusable attempt to capitalize on the popular legends for the sake of romance and publicity.

In closing, Professor Stewart says: "The lot of the iconoclast is hard; he destroys a colorful idol to replace it with a drab doctrine offering no pleasure to the imagination. At the command of Truth we must strip from the image of Harte's first six years in California, which legend has so loved to beautify, those incrustations of gems and ivory, and leaves it only a dull thing. Instead of that hero chasing bandits, digging gold, subduing entire ruffianly communities, we have the not very proficient drug clerk, private tutor, village schoolcaster, and typesetter. Well, Keats was a drug clerk, Carlyle a tutor, Franklin a setter of type, and Dr. Johnson himself taught school. The lives of literary men have not often been adventurous."

AND NOT AT NIGHT

An old Southern planter was discussing the hereafter with one of his colored servants.

"Sam," he said, "if you die first I want you to come back and tell me what it is like over there. If I die first I'll come back and tell you what it's like."

"Dat suits me, Massa," replied the old negro, "but if you dies first, Ah wants you to promise that you'll come back in de daytime."—Christian Leader.

SPLINTERS

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME I FRIDAY, JULY 20, 1928 NUMBER 51

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

The Accused: "I was not going forty miles an hour—not twenty—not even ten—in fact, when the officer came up to me, I was almost at a standstill."

Judge: "I must stop this at once, or you will be backing into someone. Forty dollars."

Yes, we sell Paints and Oils—the best.

McPherson: "What be the matter with Sandy, he seems so doonhearted of late?"
McTavish: "His daughter is taking gymnastic exercises and he is afraid she will lose some of her weight."

The best town—your home town.

Minister: "I wish to announce that next Wednesday evening the Ladies' Aid will have a rummage sale. This a chance for all the ladies of the congregation to get rid of anything that is not worth keeping but is too good to be thrown away. Don't forget to bring your husbands."

Are you willing to reduce your expenses? Get coal of us and you will.

Alice: "Which candidate are you going to vote for, Mabel?"
Mabel: "How can I tell when I haven't seen a good picture of either one of them yet?"

Lawyer: "What is your occupation?"
Witness: "I am a trunk finisher."
Lawyer: "Be more specific. Do you make them or are you a baggageman?"

Are you Hungry? Yes, Siam. Give me some Turkey, Sweden my coffee and Denmark my bill.

Build a home first. A home costs you nothing in the long run.

Flub: "What caused the collision today?"
Dub: "Two motorists after the same pedestrian."

Prof.: "Give me a sentence with Apollo in it."
Stude: "An Apollo a day keeps the doctor away."
